Introduction

Malto is a Dravidian language spoken by a people called the Pahariyas or the Maler, who inhabit the Rajmahal Hills of the former Santhal Parganas area, extending over the present-day districts Sahibganj, Godda and Pakur of the state of Jharkhand.

The Pahariyas form three endogamous subgroups, the Sawriya Pahariyas, the Malpahariyas<sup>1</sup> and the Kumarbhag Pahariyas. Of these subgroups, a large portion of the Malpahariyas who identify themselves as Dehri, Singh, Manjhi etc. speak an Indo-Aryan language. The Sawriya Pahariyas, the Kumarbhag Pahariyas and some of the Malpahariyas speak dialects of Malto, which have been described as distinct in previous studies. Droese (1884) described the grammar and vocabulary of Sawriya Pahariya Malto, probably a northern variety of it. Das (1973) is a monograph outlining the phonology and morphology of a slightly different variety of Sawriya Pahariya Malto. Mahapatra (1979) and Mahapatra (1987) are grammar and vocabulary of Malpahariya Malto, and the former also compares Malpahariya with Sawriya Pahariya and Kumarbhag dialects. Kumarbhag Malto is briefly described in Das (1973:87–88) and Mahapatra (1979:202–219).

Kurux shows relatively little dialectal variation despite the large area and number of its speakers. The Pahariyas, though much smaller in number than Kurux speakers, usually live on hilltop villages surrounded by Santals dwelling in the plains, and geographic separation of the villages from each other seems to have created a significant dialectal variation even within Sawriya Pahariya or Malpahariya Malto. In this paper, we present small sets of words and sentences from each subgroup and district, as the first attempt of our project to collect a wide range of Malto data, outline actual dialectal variation and describe synchronic grammar of the language, and compare Malto with its sister language Kurux.

Description of the data

The present data were collected by the authors in our field trips in September 2005 and February-March 2006 planned and led by Dr. Ganesh Murmu of the Department of Tribal and Regional Languages, Ranchi University.

Two of the three sets of Sawriya Pahariya words and sentences, labeled ‘SP1’ and ‘SP2’, were recorded at Adivasi Residential Boys High School, Hiranpur, Pakur District. The speakers were all male adults, either school staff or residents of the nearby village Simal Kundi. Two pairs of two male speakers from Pakur and Sahibganj Districts recorded the sentence list, and Mr. Murli Malto and Mr. Maheshwar Malto from each pair recorded the word list. Malpahariya was also recorded at the same school on a different day. The speaker was a student of the school. Kumarbhag and the third set of Sawriya Pahariya (labeled SP3) were recorded at Adivasi Residential Boys High School, Dhamni, Godda District. The speakers were both students of the school. We wish to express our thanks to the school masters, faculty and staff members, and students of the two schools for warmly welcoming us and affording help with our interview. The following are the speaker names and the districts where they are from. All districts belong to the state of Jharkhand.

Sawriya Pahariya:

SP1. Murli Malto and Sitaram Malto. Vill. Simal Kundi, P.O. and P.S. Hiranpur, Pakur Dist.

SP2. Surja Pahariya and Maheshwar Malto. Vill. Ursa Pahar, P.O. Ghatyari, P.S. Ranga, Sahibganj Dist.

SP3. Mahesh Malto. Vill. Rajabita, Godda Dist.

Malpahariya (MP): †Suman Pahariya.<sup>2</sup> Vill. Karanpara, P.O. and P.S. Hiranpur, Pakur Dist.

Kumarbhag Pahariya (Kbh.): Babulal Pahari. Vill. Badabandh Koi, Pakur Dist.

Kurux: Bablu Tirkey. Vill. Bendora, P.O. Bendora, P.S. Chainpur, Gumla Dist. We also consulted other Kurux speakers from Gumla, Lohardaga, Ranchi and Latehar Districts.

We read the word and sentence lists in Hindi and recorded Malto response in a 44K PCM format with a Sony MZ-NH1 Hi-MD recorder. The WAV files of the recordings are available at <http://hin.osaka-gaidai.ac.jp>.

We tried to transcribe the words phonetically and the sentences phonemically, but there are a few exceptions and inconsistencies as the following:

[r]: Kurux /r/ is a flap [r] and Malto /r/ a trill [r], but we used [r] for both.

[ð/θ/d]: Malto final /d/ is pronounced either as an interdental voiced fricative, an interdental voiceless fricative or as a dental stop. We are not phonemically consistent in the sentence list.

[j/y]: Against the IPA convention, we used [j] for voiced palatal or palato-alveolar plosives and [y] for a palatal glide.

Vowel length: Kurux final vowels are usually pronounced long. Since it is almost redundant information, [ː] is not written after them in the word list.

Final /h/ and /d/: Malto final /h/ and /d/ are often inaudible, especially /d/ in /-ond/.

Even in places where they are expected, we did not write them unless confirmed aurally or in interview.

[q]: Malto /q/ is a uvular voiceless stop, but it is also pronounced as a fricative by some speakers, especially in Littipara area. We used [q] for both.

Initial vowel: Especially in Kbh. which has a phonemic glottal stop, but also in other dialects to some extent, word-initial vowel is pronounced with open glottis. In careful speech, we often hear pharyngeal frication which can be transcribed with [h] or [ʕ], but we omitted it in our transcription.

Medial consonants: Except for inflectional forms, Droese seldom writes medial consonants as geminated (see also Gordon 61). Although we followed this practice in ambiguous cases, intervocalic stops are often pronounced geminated in areas where our informants are from.

Malto verb forms: While Kurux verbs are all in verbal noun forms, the citation forms of Malto verbs are not uniform, and various forms such as imperative, present third person plural, past third person singular non-masculine are given as they are.

Discussion

In previous studies, the Malpahariya (MP) and Kumarbhag (Kbh.) dialects have been considered to have phonology and lexicon distinct from Sawriya Pahariya (SP), such as the phoneme /ʔ/ in Kbh. vs. /q/ in SP and MP, Kbh. /h/ vs. SP, MP /g/, the -t- past in MP and Kbh. vs. SP -k- past, nominal suffix -du in MP and Kbh. vs. SP -∅-u (of which -u is an enunciative vowel), and lexical items such as Kbh. and MP labʔani vs. SP e:ʈu.

In the data we collected in our first trip, we noticed that some Sawriya Pahariya nouns in SP1 (Simal Kundi, P.O. & P.S. Hiranpur, Pakur Dist.) end in -du, and Malpahariya shows /ʔ/ and /h/ instead of /q/ and /g/. In our second fieldwork, we interviewed more SP, MP and Kbh. speakers from the southwestern part of the Malto-speaking area, namely west of Hiranpur and Littipara in Pakur District, and south of Sundar Pahari in Godda District, and found the following facts:

Past suffix: SP speakers in this area use past forms in -t- such as barictan ‘I came’ vs. baricken in SP elsewhere.

Nominal suffix -du: SP, MP and Kbh. speakers all use forms with -du, and this tendency is strongest in the most south-westerly part of this area such as Amrapara block.

[ʔ]/[q], [h]/[g]: Among the MP speakers we interviewed, the only person who pronounced [q] and [g] was from Vill. Narji (P.O. Barmasiya, P.S. Littipara), which is located a few kilometers north of Littipara. The other three MP speakers, who are from south of Littipara and west of Hiranpur, pronounced [ʔ] and

[h] instead. Both of two Kbh. speakers, and all of the three SP speakers from the southern part of Sundar Pahari block or from Amrapara block also used [ʔ] and [h] instead of [q] and [ɠ] respectively.

labʔanih ‘good’: Aside from the MP and Kbh. speakers, one SP speaker from Vill. Bero Pahari (P.O. Dumbarchir, P.S. Amrapara, Pakur Dist.) used this word instead of e:ɽu which SP speakers from other areas use.

These findings make us suspect if the dialect division according to sub-tribal groups such as Sawriya Pahariya, Malpahariya and Kumarbhag Pahariya is really valid. We suggest that the characteristics which have been considered to belong to these subgroups are actually regional features, although we still need to collect more inflectional and lexical information before deciding if Sawriya Pahariya, Malpahariya or Kumarbhag dialects are distinct or constitute a continuous language community.

Notes

<sup>1</sup> Also known as the Marpahariyas (Mahapatra 1979:5) in some areas. Subgroups such as the Dehri Malpahariyas speak an Indo-Aryan language. Marriage between the Malpahariyas and the Kumarbhag Pahariyas is possible according to them.

<sup>2</sup> On our visit in February 2006, we learned with deep sorrow that this brilliant and promising student passed away due to malaria just a few months after our interview. We humbly dedicate this paper to his memory.
